Application for permission to make PACC application

15 60G.—(1) Subject to section 60I, before making a PACC application, the applicant must apply to the Court of Appeal for, and obtain, the permission of that court to do so.

20 (2) Despite section 50(1), an application for PACC permission may be heard and determined by a single Judge of the Court of Appeal.

(3) An application for PACC permission must be fixed for hearing within such period as is prescribed by the Rules of Court.

25 (4) The applicant in an application for PACC permission must file written submissions in support of that application, and such other documents as are prescribed in the Rules of Court, within such periods as are prescribed in the Rules of Court.

30 (5) The respondent in an application for PACC permission may file written submissions in relation to that application within such period as is prescribed in the Rules of Court.

(6) The Registrar or any Supreme Court Judge may extend or abridge any period mentioned in subsection (3), (4) or (5).

(7) In deciding whether or not to grant an application for PACC permission, the Court of Appeal must consider the following matters: 5

(a) whether the PACC application to be made is based on material (being evidence or legal arguments) that, even with reasonable diligence, could not have been adduced in court before the relevant date; 10

(b) whether there was any delay in filing the application for PACC permission after the PACP or counsel for the PACP obtained the material mentioned in paragraph (a) and the reasons for the delay; 15

(c) whether subsection (4) is complied with;

(d) whether the PACC application to be made has a reasonable prospect of success.

(8) An application for PACC permission may, without being set down for hearing, be summarily dealt with by a written order of the Court of Appeal. 20

(9) Before summarily refusing an application for PACC permission under subsection (8), the Court of Appeal, in addition to considering the matters mentioned in subsection (7) — 25

(a) must consider the applicant's written submissions, if any; and

(b) may, but is not required to, consider the respondent's written submissions, if any. 30

(10) Before summarily granting an application for PACC permission, the Court of Appeal, in addition to considering the matters mentioned in subsection (7) —

- (a) must consider the applicant's written submissions, if any; and
- (b) must consider the respondent's written submissions, if any.

(11) The Court of Appeal may —

- (d) make any incidental directions or give any interim orders (including a stay of execution of the death sentence) as the Court considers necessary;
- (e) take additional evidence.

(12) The Court of Appeal may, if it thinks additional evidence needs to be taken under subsection (11) —

- (a) where the application for PACC permission is dealt with by a single Judge of the Court of Appeal — take such evidence itself; or
- (b) where the application for PACC permission is dealt with by 3 or any greater uneven number of Judges sitting in the Court of Appeal — either take such evidence itself or have such evidence taken by one of those Judges.

30

(13) If the Court of Appeal does not grant the application for PACC permission, no further proceedings may be taken in respect of the PACC application.

(14) Subsection (13) does not prevent the taking of any proceedings against the PACP's counsel (if any) in relation to the counsel's conduct in the application for PACC permission.

(15) Despite any provision in this section, if an application for PACC permission is made by a PACP, and prior to the making of that application, the applicant is found by the Court of Appeal —

(a) to have abused the process of the court in relation to a relevant application that was filed on or after the date of commencement of the Post-appeal Applications in Capital Cases Act 2022; or

(b) to have abused the process of the court in order to delay or frustrate the carrying out of the sentence of death in relation to an application (other than a relevant application) or action that was filed on or after the date mentioned in paragraph (a), the Court of Appeal must not grant the application for PACC permission unless —

(c) the PACP adduces material (being evidence or legal arguments) that was not adduced in court before the date of the most recent of any such finding of abuse of process by the Court of Appeal; and

(d) the material could not, even with reasonable diligence, have been adduced in court before the date mentioned in paragraph (c).

Hearing of PACC application

5 60H.—(1) Subject to section 60I, where the Court of Appeal grants the application for PACC permission, the PACC application must be made to the Court of Appeal, and fixed for hearing, within such period as is prescribed by the Rules of Court.

(2) The applicant in a PACC application must file such documents in support of that application, within such period, as are prescribed in the Rules of Court.

10 (3) The respondent in a PACC application must file such documents in relation to that application, within such period, as are prescribed in the Rules of Court.

15 (4) The Registrar or any Supreme Court Judge may extend or abridge any period mentioned in subsection (1), (2) or (3).

(5) The Court of Appeal which hears a PACC application may exercise any power and make any order that could have been exercised and made by the Appellate Division or the General Division (whether or not exercising its original jurisdiction).

20 (6) A PACC application may, without being set down for hearing, be summarily dealt with by a written order of the Court of Appeal.

25 (7) Before summarily refusing a PACC application under subsection (6), the Court of Appeal —

(a) must consider the applicant's written submissions, if any; and

(b) may, but is not required to, consider the respondent's written submissions, if any.

30 (8) Except where subsection (7) applies, before summarily deciding a PACC application on its merits, the Court of Appeal —

(a) must consider the applicant's written submissions, if any; and

(b) must consider the respondent's written submissions, if any.

(9) The Court of Appeal may —

(a) before deciding a PACC application;

(b) when granting a PACC application; or

(c) when summarily granting a PACC application, do one or both of the following:

(d) make any incidental directions or give any interim orders (including a stay of execution of the death sentence) as the Court considers necessary;

(e) take additional evidence.

(10) The Court of Appeal may, if it thinks additional evidence needs to be taken under subsection (9), either take such evidence itself or have such evidence taken by one of the Judges of the Court of Appeal.

Procedure for making PACC application, etc., when there is pending PACC application, etc.

60I.—(1) Where any application for PACC permission, or any PACC application, made by a PACP (each called in this section the specified application) is pending determination, the PACP cannot make a subsequent application for PACC permission or a subsequent PACC application (each called in this section the subsequent application) unless the PACP has the permission of the Court of Appeal dealing with the specified application to do so.

(2) The Court of Appeal dealing with the specified application may do any one of the following:

(a) grant permission for the PACP to adduce further material when the Court of Appeal is dealing with the specified application;

(b) grant permission for the PACP to make the subsequent application separately under section 60G or 60H, as the case may be;

(c) refuse to grant permission under paragraph (a) or (b).

5

(3) When dealing with any specified application or subsequent application under this section, the Court of Appeal may give such directions as the Court of Appeal thinks necessary or expedient —

10

(a) in the case of a specified application — in respect of that application or a subsequent application; or

(b) in the case of a subsequent application — in respect of that application.

15

Court of Appeal may determine whether application is, or action contains, application for PACC permission or PACC application, etc.

20

60J.—(1) Where any application or action by a PACP (called in this section the specified application or specified action, as the case may be) is filed in a court other than the Court of Appeal, the Court of Appeal may determine whether the specified application is, or the specified action contains, an application for PACC permission or a PACC application.

25

(2) Despite section 50(1), a determination under subsection (1) may be made by a single Judge of the Court of Appeal.

30

(3) If the Court of Appeal makes a determination under subsection (1) that the specified application is, or the specified action contains, an application for PACC permission or a PACC application, the Court of Appeal may —

(a) proceed to determine the specified application, or that part of the specified action containing an application for PACC permission or a PACC application, in accordance with section 60G or 60H, as the case may be; or

(b) strike out the specified application or specified action, in whole or in part.

(4) The Court of Appeal may, in making any determination under subsection (1), do one or both of the following:

10

(a) make any incidental directions or give any interim orders (including a stay of execution of the death sentence) as the Court considers necessary;

15

(b) take additional evidence.

(5) The Court of Appeal may, if it thinks additional evidence needs to be taken under subsection (4) —

(a) where the determination under subsection (1) is being made by a single Judge of the Court of Appeal — take such evidence itself; or

20

(b) where the determination under subsection (1) is being made by 3 or any greater uneven number of Judges sitting in the Court of Appeal — either take such evidence itself or have such evidence taken by one of those Judges.

15

(a) committed an abuse of process, in the case of a relevant application; or

20

(2) In deciding whether to make a finding under subsection (1), the Court of Appeal may inquire into and take into account the following matters:

25

(a) in relation to an application for PACC permission —

EXPLANATORY STATEMENT

This Bill seeks to deal with a post-appeal application in a capital case (PACC application) by a prisoner awaiting capital punishment (PACP) by introducing a new procedure for such PACC applications.

The new procedure (which introduces certain matters to be considered by the Court of Appeal when hearing an application for permission to make a PACC application) seeks to ensure that safeguards are in place to prevent abuse of process by a PACP when making a PACC application.

The Bill also —

- (a) provides for findings of abuse of process by the Court of Appeal in certain circumstances;
- (b) amends certain provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code 2010 (CPC) relating to the carrying out of the sentence of death;
- (c) amends Division 1B of Part 20 of the CPC (relating to review applications) to align certain provisions in that Division with the new procedure for PACC applications; and
- (d) makes a consequential amendment to the Coroners Act 2010.

Clause 1 relates to the short title and commencement.

Clause 2 amends the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1969 (SCJA) to confer jurisdiction on the Court of Appeal to deal with any application or action that is to be dealt with by the Court of Appeal as is provided in the new Division 4 of Part 5 of the SCJA.

Clause 2 also inserts a new Division 4 to Part 5 of the SCJA which deals with the new procedure for making a PACC application by an applicant (being a PACP), and also findings of abuse of process by the Court of Appeal in certain circumstances.

The new section 60F contains definitions of terms used in the new Division 4 of Part 5 of the SCJA.

The term “PACP” means a prisoner awaiting capital punishment.

The term “post-appeal application in a capital case” or “PACC application” means any application (not being a review application) that is —

- (a) made by a PACP after the relevant date (which date differs depending on whether the PACC application is a first PACC application, or a second or subsequent PACC application made after the determination of an earlier application); and
- (b) either an application for a stay of the execution of the death sentence on the PACP, or an application the determination of which calls into question, or may call into question, the propriety of the conviction of, the imposition of the sentence of death on, or the carrying out of the sentence of death on, the PACP.

Some examples are given of an application made by a PACP the determination of which calls into question, or may call into question, the propriety of the conviction of, the imposition of the sentence of death on, or the carrying out of the sentence of death on, the PACP. A PACC application is not a review application, which is defined to mean a review application within the meaning of section 394F of the CPC where the application is to review an earlier decision of the Court of Appeal relating to the offence for which the sentence of death was imposed on a PACP.

The new section 60G relates to an application for PACC permission. Before a PACP can make a PACC application, the PACP must apply to the Court of Appeal for, and obtain, the permission of that court (which may comprise a single Judge of the Court of Appeal) to do so.

However, this procedure is subject to the new section 60I, which relates to an application for PACC permission or a PACC application that is made by a PACP when there is another application for PACC permission or a PACC application made by the PACP that is pending determination. When there is a pending application for PACC permission or PACC application, the procedure in the new section 60I applies.

An application for PACC permission must be fixed for hearing within such period as is prescribed by the Rules of Court. The applicant in an application for PACC permission must also file written submissions in support of that application, and such other documents as are prescribed in the Rules of Court, within such periods as are prescribed in the Rules of Court.

In deciding whether or not to grant an application for PACC permission, the Court of Appeal must consider 4 matters. First, whether the PACC application to be made is based on material (being evidence or legal arguments) that, even with reasonable diligence, could not have been adduced in court before the relevant date. Secondly, whether there was any delay in filing the application for PACC permission after the PACP or counsel for the PACP obtained the material mentioned in the new section 60G(7)(a) and the reasons for the delay. Thirdly, whether the new section 60G(4) is complied with. Lastly, whether the PACC application to be made has a reasonable prospect of success.

An application for PACC permission may be summarily dealt with by the Court of Appeal.

The Court of Appeal may, before deciding any application for PACC permission, when granting an application for PACC permission or when summarily granting an application for PACC permission, make any incidental directions or give any interim orders (including a stay of execution of the death sentence) as the Court considers necessary, and take additional evidence. If additional evidence is to be taken, such evidence may be taken by the Court of Appeal itself, or by one of the Judges of the Court of Appeal.

If the Court of Appeal does not grant the application for PACC permission, no further proceedings may be taken in respect of the PACC application. However, proceedings may still be taken against the PACP's counsel (if any) in relation to the counsel's conduct in the application for PACC permission.

If an application for PACC permission is made by a PACP, and prior to the making of that application, the applicant has been found by the Court of Appeal —

- (a) to have abused the process of the court in relation to a relevant application that was filed on or after the date of commencement of the Post-appeal Applications in Capital Cases Act 2022; or
- (b) to have abused the process of the court in order to delay or frustrate the carrying out of the sentence of death in an application (other than a relevant application) or action that was filed on or after that date, the Court of Appeal must not grant the application for PACC permission unless the PACP adduces material (being evidence or legal arguments) that was not adduced in court before the date of the most recent of any such finding of abuse of process by the Court of Appeal and the material could not, even with reasonable diligence, have been adduced in court before the date of such finding.

The new section 60H relates to the hearing of a PACC application. Where the Court of Appeal grants the application for PACC permission, the PACC application must be made to the Court of Appeal, and fixed for hearing, within such period as is prescribed by the Rules of Court. However, this procedure is also subject to the new section 60I. When there is a pending application for PACC permission or PACC application, the procedure in the new section 60I applies.

The applicant in a PACC application must file such documents in support of that application, within such period, as are prescribed in the Rules of Court.

The Court of Appeal which hears a PACC application may exercise any power and make any order that could have been exercised and made by the Appellate Division or the General Division (whether or not exercising its original jurisdiction).

A PACC application may be summarily dealt with by the Court of Appeal.

The Court of Appeal may, before deciding a PACC application, when granting a PACC application, or when summarily granting a PACC application, make any incidental directions or give any interim orders (including a stay of execution of the death sentence) as the Court considers necessary, and take additional evidence. The Court of Appeal may, if it thinks additional evidence needs to be taken, either take such evidence itself or have such evidence taken by one of the Judges of the Court of Appeal.

The new section 60I deals with the procedure for making an application for PACC permission or a PACC application when there is a pending application for PACC permission or a pending PACC application. Where any application for PACC permission, or any PACC application, made by a PACP (the specified application) is pending determination, the PACP cannot make a subsequent application for PACC permission or a subsequent PACC application (subsequent application) unless the PACP has the permission of the Court of Appeal dealing with the specified application to do so.

The Court of Appeal dealing with the specified application may do any one of 3 things. First, the Court of Appeal may grant permission for the PACP to adduce further material when the Court of Appeal is dealing with the specified application. Secondly, the Court of Appeal may grant permission for the PACP to make the subsequent application separately under the new section 60G or 60H, as the case may be. Lastly, the Court of Appeal may refuse to grant any of those permissions.

When dealing with any specified application or subsequent application under the new section 60I, the Court of Appeal may give such directions as the Court of Appeal thinks necessary or expedient. In the case of a specified application, directions may be given in respect of that specified application or a subsequent application. In the case of a subsequent application, directions may be given in respect of that subsequent application.

The new section 60J provides that where any application or action by a PACP is filed in a court other than the Court of Appeal (the specified application or specified action), the Court of Appeal may determine whether the specified application is, or the specified action contains, an application for PACC permission or a PACC application. A determination by the Court of Appeal may be made by a single Judge of the Court of Appeal. If the Court of Appeal makes a determination that the specified application is, or the specified action contains, an application for PACC permission or a PACC application, the Court of Appeal may proceed to determine the specified application, or that part of the specified action containing an application for PACC permission or a PACC application, in accordance with the new section 60G or 60H, as the case may be. Alternatively, the Court of Appeal may strike out the specified application or specified action, in whole or in part. If additional evidence is to be taken, such evidence may be taken by the Judge making the determination under the new section 60J(1). If the determination under the new section 60J(1) is being made by 3 or any greater uneven number of Judges, additional evidence may be taken by the Court of Appeal itself, or by one of those Judges.

The new section 60K provides that nothing in the new Division 4 of Part 5 of the SCJA affects the operation of Division 1B of Part 20 of the CPC.

The new section 60L provides that despite anything in the SCJA or any other written law, a stay of execution of the death sentence may only be granted by the Court of Appeal.

The new section 60M relates to the Court of Appeal's power to make a finding of abuse of process. When dealing with any application or action, the Court of Appeal may, on its own motion or upon the application of the Attorney-General or the Public Prosecutor, decide whether to make a finding that a PACP, or a counsel for a PACP, has in the commencement, continuation or conduct of the proceedings relating to the application or action, committed an abuse of process (in relation to a relevant application) or an abuse of process in order to delay or frustrate the carrying out of the sentence of death imposed on the PACP (in relation to an application other than a relevant application, or an action).

In deciding whether to make a finding under the new section 60M(1), the Court of Appeal may inquire into and take into account certain matters set out in the new section 60M(2).

Where a relevant application is heard before a single Judge of the Court of Appeal, a finding of an abuse of process may be made by that Judge.

In deciding whether to make a finding under the new section 60M(1), the Court of Appeal (if it comprises a single Judge of the Court of Appeal) may, if it thinks additional evidence is necessary, take such evidence itself. If the Court of Appeal comprises 3 or any greater uneven number of Judges, additional evidence may be taken by the Court of Appeal itself, or by one of those Judges.

Clause 3 deals with certain amendments to the CPC.

Clause 3(a) provides that a warrant may be carried out unless the Court of Appeal has granted a stay of execution, or there is an application for permission to apply for a stay of execution or an application for a stay of execution filed in the Court of Appeal and served on the Singapore Prison Service (unless any prescribed exemption from such service applies) in accordance with the regulations made under section 428 of the CPC, or the President has ordered a respite of the execution of the warrant pursuant to the amended section 313(1)(h) of the CPC.

Clause 3(b) provides that despite the amended section 313(1)(ia)(ii) of the CPC (which prohibits a warrant from being carried out if there is an application for permission to apply for a stay of execution or an application for a stay of execution filed in the Court of Appeal and served on the Singapore Prison Service), the warrant may still be carried out if 2 criteria are met.

The first criterion is that the application for permission to apply for a stay of execution or the application for a stay of execution is filed by a PACP who had previously been found —

- (a) by the Court of Appeal to have abused the process of the court in relation to a relevant application that was filed on or after the date of commencement of the Post-appeal Applications in Capital Cases Act 2022; or
- (b) by the Court of Appeal to have abused the process of the court in order to delay or frustrate the carrying out of the sentence of death in relation to an application (other than a relevant application) or an action that was filed on or after such date.

The second criterion is that the PACP does not have the permission of the Court of Appeal to make a PACC application under the new section 60G of the SCJA, or to make a review application under section 394H of the CPC.

Clause 3(c) makes a technical amendment to section 324 of the CPC.

Clause 3(d), (e) and (f) inserts new definitions in section 394F of the CPC.

Clause 3(g) amends section 394F(2) of the CPC to provide for the situations when a specified application (which has been defined to mean a civil application, an application for PACC permission, or a PACC application) is related to a review application made in respect of an earlier decision.

Clause 3(h) and (i) amends section 394H(6) of the CPC to provide the quorum of Judges who can hear an application for permission under that section.

Clause 3(j), (k), (l) and (m) amends section 394H of the CPC to align certain matters in the procedure for an application for permission under that section with that under the new section 60G of the SCJA (relating to the procedure for an application for PACC permission).

Clause 3(n) and (o) amends section 394I of the CPC to provide for certain provisions in that section to apply similarly to a related application for PACC permission or a related PACC application.

Clause 3(p) amends section 394I of the CPC to provide for the powers of the appellate court in relation to a review application.

Clause 3(q) amends section 394K(2) of the CPC such that the provision also applies in relation to a related application for PACC permission or a related PACC application.

Clause 4 makes a consequential amendment to the Coroners Act 2010.

Clause 5 sets out saving and transitional provisions. Where a certain application or action has been filed before the appointed day (defined to mean the date of commencement of the Post-appeal Applications in Capital Cases Act 2022), any proceedings in relation to such application or action may be dealt with and disposed of in accordance with the law as in force immediately before the appointed day.
