Purpose of Regulations

3. These Regulations prescribe, under section 435 of the Act, circumstances in which a person may circumvent an access control measure.

Exception — circumventing access control measure that prevents text from being converted into accessible format, etc.

4. A person may circumvent an access control measure that has been applied to a protected copy of a literary or dramatic work if —

- (a) the work is in an electronic format;
- (b) the access control measure has been applied to all reasonably available electronic copies of the work (including any digital text edition made available by an institution aiding persons with print disabilities) so as to —
  - (i) prevent the operation of any function that reads aloud the text of the work; or
  - (ii) prevent any specialised assistive device or computer software from converting the text of the work into an accessible format; and
- (c) the circumvention is for the purpose of a dealing, in relation to the work, in circumstances that constitute a permitted use under any provision in Division 4 of Part 5 of the Act.

Exception — preservation and replacement of material in public collections

5.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a person may circumvent an access control measure that has been applied to a protected copy of an authorial work, a sound recording, a film or a recording of a protected performance if the circumvention is for the purpose of making a copy of the authorial work, sound recording, film or recording of a protected performance in circumstances that constitute a permitted use under section 232(1) of the Act.

(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply where the circumstances relate to making a copy of the material under section 232(2)(c)(iv) of the Act.

Exception — administration of public collections

6.—(1) Subject to paragraph (2), a person may circumvent an access control measure that has been applied to a protected copy of an authorial work, a sound recording, a film or a recording of a protected performance if the circumvention is for the purpose of making a copy of or communicating the authorial work, sound recording, film or recording of a protected performance in circumstances that constitute a permitted use under section 233(1) of the Act.

(2) Paragraph (1) does not apply where the circumstances relate to making a copy of the material or a communication of the material for the purpose in section 233(2)(c)(vi) of the Act.

Made on 18 December 2024.
